CANTY TAKES THE STAND

He Tells the Story of the Quarrel With Rye.

HIS ENEMY CARRIED A KNIFE

The Accused Testifies as to the Business Transactions Which He Had With Ryc-Several Witnesses Tell the Jury of Threats Which Rye Made Against Canty.

The interest in the Canty trial reached a climax today a few minutes before noon when Mr. Worthington, without the slightest warning, called Dennis J. Canty, the defendant, to the witness stand to testify in his own behalf.

As the defendant took the stand he was paler than usual, but his voice was steady and his demeanor calm and collected. Every word he uttered was attentively listened to by everyone. He had only concluded his version of the altercation with Rye the day before the shooting when the our arrived and the court adjourned.

Dennis J. Canty, the defendant, testified: "I am thirty-nine years old; when I came to Washington I had charge of a division in the Interstate Commerce Commission till two years ago; I then went into the stock brokerage business."

He then explained his business trans-

He then explained his business transfers till it came to be "Canty & Co."
Continuing, he said: "The firm failed last August; I met Mr. Rye four years ago; he had two transactions with me; at the time we failed we owed Rye between $400 and $500; we settled with him, I understood, on the basis of 25 cents on the dollar; a few days before I went to New York, Mr. Van Senden told me that he had some "maner" of Rye's: I never had York, Mr. Van Senden told me that he had some "paper" of Rye's; I never had any talk with Rye about money from the time we pald him the $100 till the day before the shooting; I saw Rye frequently but did not talk business; I saw Mr. Maddux after I came back from New York, some time in October; he told me that Rye was looking for me about some money matters and that ne (Rye) had said he would 'cut my vitals out,' and told me to watch out for him as he was a dangerous man.

"I saw Rye in front of 1331 F Street The day before the shooting. As I was about going into No. 1331 F Street, I saw Rye standing in front talking to some one; Rye called me, and I went to the railing and sat down; he said to me: 'Well, how about our affair?' I told him we had a note of his from Havenner, and saw a knife blade in it; I saw about two inches of the blade; I then got off the railing; I said nothing till he said: G—you, I'll go anywhere with you, and I asked him to go inside; Rye said: 'No; the street is good enough for me,' and kept on abusing me; I went into the office, and left him standing on the pavement; I did not see Mr. Van Senden before the difficulty with Rye."

Miss Jennie Hanson, a chambermaid at the Wellington Hotel testified that she

John S. Holden, the paying teller at the American Security Company, testified that Canty had a small balance in the bank and drew it out on the morning of the shooting.

Rye in September, 1897. District Attorney Davis objected as it was too remote. The court overruled the objection and the witness was told to repeat the threats. Mr. Madux said if he was to repeat the language of Rye the ladies would have to leave the room. The court asked the ladies to retire, and the witness then proceeded to repeat what Rye had said about Canty. It was in effect that Canty owed. Canty. It was in effect that Canty owed canty. It was in effect that Canty owed him (Rye) money, and he was going to "have it or cut his heart out." The other language repeated by the witness is unfit for publication.

Mr. Maddux stated that Rye had made threats against Canty on another occasion and he had warned Canty of what had been said. He also said he had played cards with Rye, but not with Canty.

Mr. C. T. Havenner, a stock broker, testified: "I know Canty and knew Rye."

He was shown the note given him by Rye and said he had given it to Van Senden. Continuing, he said: "I told Van Senden that Rye always said he would pay the note. I gave the note, the face value of which is $550, for $100." which is $650, for $100."

Andrew Lawrence, colored, was recalled to testify as to what he heard Rye say five or ten minutes before he was killed. He said that at 11:10 o'clock in front of io. 1331 F Street he heard Rye say, "Can ty owes me 25% and if he doesn't give it to me there is no telling what I'll do."

Lawrence said at that time Rye had a knife in his hand and was shaking it in the faces of gentlemen he was talking to.

On cross-examination by Mr. Davis the witness said he came to Washington in witness said he came to Washington witness said he came to Washington in 1886, and then worked three weeks in handling ice. The witness on being shown his statement as published in the Star on the evening of the shooting denied that it was called to state the substance of a conversation he had with Rye at Chamberlain's Hotel in January, 1898. Substantially it was that Rye had said that Canty owed him money and that if he didn't get it he (Rye) would kill him. Claussman also had another conversation with Rye a short while before the shooting in which Claussman said he had not communi-cated the threats to Canty.

When the court convened after recess the defendant took the stand again and continued his story of the shooting and Chesapeake and Potomac in a Three-Cornered Fight.

PHONES IN SUB-POSTOFFICES

laimed by the Company That the Druggists in Whose Stores Telephones Are Located for Use by Postal Substations Do Not Permit Nickel-in-the-Slot Facilities.

An interesting triangular fight is going on between the Postoffice Department, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, and the druggist proprietors of the various substations of the Postoffice. It is all over the rental of telephones.

In the beginning of the year the depart-ment agreed to pay the telephone com-pany $40 per annum for the 'phones con-necting the substations with the city postoffice, the company agreeing to give the Government the low rate in consideration of the fact that they be allowed to run slot machine devices in connection with the telephones to charge all patrons so much per message for everything but postoffice business.

A few days ago the telephone company handed in a little bill for each substation's telephone, charging at the rate of 19 a month or $120 a year, just three times the amount contracted for by the department. The post officials refused to pay the extra $6 a month, as did the druggists.

extra % a month, as did the druggists, and now the telephone company says the phones will be taken out, unless it gets the money.

The trouble is caused, it is said, by the fight that has been going on between the Druggists' Association and the Telephone Orngasts Association and the lecephone Company, the former boxing up the phones for all business except postal matters, thus preventing the company from getting the nickel-in-the-slot reve-nue it expected to get. The Government insize that the telearine Boat Might Do the Work if It Could Be Transported to Santiago and Loaded With Torpedoes While Under Water-Many Difficulties in the Way.

Inventor Holland, of submarine boa fame, has not come to Washington, as announced, to confer with the Navy offiers regarding his plan of entering Santiago harbor and annihilating the Spanish fleet from below waves. While in theory his plan is a very plausible one, the au thorities do not think it is practicable.

"In the first place, the Holland boat is not made to take long journeys," said Chief of Ordnance O'Neill. "How does Mr. Holland propose to get his boat down to the harbor? In order to get a torpedo into his craft the boat has to be pedo into his craft the boat has to be lifted partly out of the water by derricks, as there is no means of loading them in while she is afloat or submerged. After he exploded the two torpedoes the boat will carry, what would he do then? Go back to Key West, hoist her out of the water and load her again, I suppose."

"As a matter of fact, the Holland boat is as yet very much of an experiment, but the Government is willing to give it a fair trial. The sum of $150,000 has already been appropriated to build the "Plunger" after Mr. Holland's ideas, and when it is done it will be given a good trial. The experiments Mr. Holland has made with his andividual boat have not been entirely successful. No one but Holland and his own employees have ever gone down with her, and when she was under the surface, who could tell what she was doing? She might have been rolling around helplessiy on the bottom, for aught we know. "I don't think the fleet now supposed aught we know.
